Photography exhibition:

‘Rural Moments – A vision on the life in Portuguese villages through photography’ (2006-2012)

University of Aveiro Auditorium Bookshop

From September 28th until October 10th

By Rui Pires (<http://1x.com/member/ruipires/about/>)

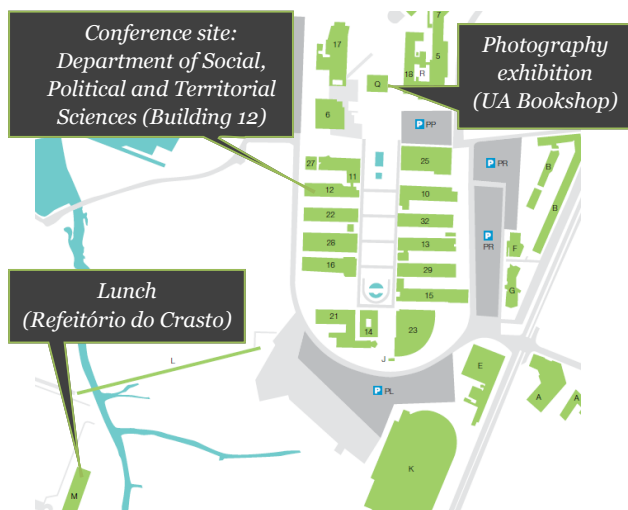

Rui Pires is a photographer with a classic and humanistic style and he is particularly dedicated to documentary photography. He has graduated in Professional Photography at the New York Institute of Photography, in Image Analysis and Evaluation, and in Advanced Photography at the PSA - Photographic Society of America. He is a member of PSA and he is an Independent Curator for several exhibitions and Galleries, as well as for diverse Non-Governmental Organizations.

Rui Pires is a nationally and mainly internationally awarded photographer for the project Rural Moments as well as for other of his (several) projects.

In 2006 Rui Pires started a project that aims to document the life in Portuguese villages that are going through a process of abandonment. The project is still running, although the photos presented in the exhibition are from 2006 until 2012. The photos were mainly taken in Serra de S. Macário and Serra de Montemuro, Portugal.

The Aveiro University was the first in Portugal to offer a higher education degree in the Urban and Regional Planning field, by 1983. A decade after its inception, the Association of Portuguese Planners (APPLA) was created in Aveiro. It was aimed at promoting and preserving the values and expertise of a young profession, as well as to protect the professional interests of its associates. With more than 350 undergraduate and graduate members, during the last two decades, APPLA has been organizing meetings, both for its associates and open to the society, in order to promote the exchange of ideas and practices and to debate emergent and critical issues on the planning field in Portugal and Europe.

Since the beginning of this decade, the ENPLANT (National Territorial Planners Meeting) has been marking, in a more systematic way, the annual agenda of APPLA, in close collaboration with the Social, Political and Territorial Department - University of Aveiro. This IX ENPLANT, which is part of the International Conference “Meanings of the Rural”, is, thus, an excellent opportunity to deepen the debate around rising topics on diffuse rural-urban relations and on the role planning and public policies may play.
